1	a)	Identify the misspelled words and Subject-Verb Agreement errors in the passage below and record only the correct versions on your answer sheet. When researchers conduct an analyses of environmental data, they often use different models to understand complex patterns. The mechnism behind climate change is not always easy to explain, and scientists frequently interprate large amounts of information before reaching conclusions. Every student in the research team have a specific responsibility, and each of the reports contain valuable findings. The committee of experts are planning a new project to address environmental challenges in urban areas. The project manager, along with several senior researchers, have prepared a detailed proposal for funding. In addition to the proposal, a set of recommendations has been submitted to the authorities for review. Before the final report was published, the team had carefully examined the factors affecting ecological equillibrium in the region. Neither the senior scientists nor the research assistant were available during the final presentation because of an emergency. Over the past decade, technological advancements have helped researchers create more accurate models, although some concepts remain highly abstarct for the general public. The findings of the study are expected to influence future policies, and the government has already expressed interest in implementing several recommendations. As a result, many experts believe that scientific research will continue to play a vital role in promoting sustainable development.	5	CO2
