| 1. | Shawon is a young engineer working at a well-known firm. He is dedicated, hardworking, and always honest with his work. Recently, his supervisor asked him to exaggerate the performance and capabilities of a new project they are presenting to a potential client. Shawon knows that the project is good but does not meet all the promises his supervisor wants him to make. He faces a dilemma: lying would secure a large contract and benefit the company, which could lead to his promotion, whereas being truthful might cause the company to lose the client. Shawon is confused about what to do, as he values honesty but also feels pressure from his boss. | | | CO1, L2 |
