[The figures in the right margin indicate the full marks and corresponding course outcomes. All portions of each question must be answered sequentially.]

1.	In today's competitive world, planning a career is no longer just about earning a livelihood but also about contributing meaningfully to society. A sense of patriotism—love and responsibility towards one's country—can guide individuals to choose professions and set goals that benefit not just themselves but also their nation. In Bangladesh, the youth are the backbone of progress. With the right mindset, skills, and values, they can bring about change in education, technology, agriculture, healthcare, and beyond. Illustrate how patriotism can influence your career planning and decision-making. Apply five relevant examples how your chosen career path can contribute to the development of Bangladesh.	[10]	CO2
2.	Rahim is a university student who recently participated in a national innovation competition. Although his idea was creative and practical, his presentation failed to engage the audience. He lacked confidence, his slides were cluttered, and he struggled to explain how his idea addressed real-world problems. The judges mentioned that while his technical concept was strong, he needed to improve his communication and collaboration skills to be more effective in a team-based, fast-changing 21st-century workplace. Based on the scenario above, infer at least four essential skills Rahim needs to develop to succeed in the 21st century, particularly in relation to presentation skills. Explain how each skill contributes to personal and professional success.	[10]	CO3
3.	Maya is a recent university graduate who has started working at a multinational company. She wants to create a strong professional impression in her workplace while balancing her tight schedule and limited income. She often struggles to meet deadlines and ends up overspending her monthly budget, which adds to her stress. Maya is determined to improve her professional image and handle her time and money more effectively. Analyze how Maya can apply impression management strategies, along with effective time and financial management techniques, to become more efficient and professionally respected in her workplace. Provide specific five actions and outcomes to support your explanation.	[10]	CO3

4.	Over the last decade, Artificial Intelligence (AI) has become deeply integrated with social media platforms. From personalized content recommendations and facial recognition to targeted advertisements and automated moderation, AI is shaping how people interact, think, and behave online. While AI makes social media more efficient and engaging, it also raises concerns about privacy, misinformation, emotional manipulation, and the creation of echo chambers. Examine how AI influences individual behavior and society through social media by explaining four impacts and one long-term consequence. Show the three connections between AI technology, social media usage, and their effects on human behavior and social systems.	[10]	CO3
