1.		Shawon is a university student who is helping to organize a departmental competition. Usually, the event follows the same format every year. The same types of activities are repeated, the same students lead the teams, and success is judged only by winning prizes. While working on the event, Shawon feels that the competition can be more meaningful. He notices that many students have creative ideas, but they are not encouraged to share them. Some students feel left out and believe that only a few people matter in such events. Even though Shawon is not holding a top position in the organizing team, he wants to make the event better.
